

Name: _____ Date: _____

Words to know:

contrary (opposite, opposed), conflict (to be in opposition), irrational (unreasonable), subjective (based on feelings or opinions rather than objective truth)

	Faith is irrational and should be rejected. Faith and reason are in contradiction.
	Faith and reason are in contradiction. All we need is faith; reason and science can be rejected or ignored.
	Faith is subjective: true for me, but not necessarily for others.

St. Thomas: Faith and reason are never truly in _____. There is a fundamental unity of _____ which is based on the order of reality.

Ultimately, the truth is based on something outside of the mind, that is, _____. _____ is the source of reality. He is the ultimate source of the light of _____ and also of divine revelation and the light of _____.

The Christian faith is eminently _____. In the case of faith, we trust in _____ who is _____.

God gives us signs of _____ that show the rational warrant for accepting Christianity.

What is one truth of faith that, although it is reasonable, cannot be proven by natural reason? _____

By the supernatural light of _____, the believer embraces the truths of faith without hesitation or reservation and affirms that they are true because _____ bears witness to us about them.

Comprehension Question: Based on this video, do you think studying subjects other than theology (like math, history, and science) can help you know more about God? Explain.